Spear's analysis method examines a company's value chain and finds changes that could offer overlooked opportunities. The research process is rigorous: surveying customers, assessing financials, analyzing the quality of the leadership team, and uncovering differentiated products and untapped markets. The most suitable investment for the most significant impact isn't usually what's in vogue.

We gain an edge by paying attention where others aren't. The opportunities uncovered aren't just good for your returns but also good for the world. Spear builds products for people who care about where their investments go.

I believe a strategy based on fundamental analysis is the best way to invest actively and that we all deserve access to this level of elite asset management.

That's why I started Spear. With our funds, whether you have $100 million or just a few hundred, you can take advantage of the same high-end strategies that private hedge funds and wealthy investors use.

Using the Spear method, I crafted a concentrated portfolio that evolved into our primary product. I'm excited to make it publicly available and introduce it to you today.

Meet Alpha.

Identifying trends in vogue is easy. Picking the right companies is hard.

Targeted

Alpha is an ETF with a concentrated focus on a select 20 B2B companies poised to grow from breakthrough trends. This narrow target over a year or longer timeline helps us ensure we’re on the cutting edge and recognize the most lucrative opportunities.

Investing involves risk including possible loss of principal. The fund is subject to both growth and value equity risk. Investing in growth companies that are based on an issuer's future earnings may be more volatile if revenues fall short of expectations. Investing in value companies that remain unfavored or are undervalued for long periods of time could have a negative on the fund's performance. Companies in the industrials sector may be adversely affected by changes in government regulation, world events, economic conditions, environmental damages, product liability claims and exchange rates.

"Alpha" strategy seeks to identify investment opportunities in which the performance of a company's stock will exceed that of the market over time. B2B stands for business-to-business.

Technology, Space, Robotics and Automation companies are particularly vulnerable to rapid changes in product cycles, obsolescence, government regulation and competition, both domestically and internationally, which may have an adverse effect on growth and profit margins. Market or economic factors impacting these companies that rely heavily on technological advances could have a major effect on the value of the Fund's investments. SPRX is non-diversified and may invest in a greater percentage of its assets in securities of an issuer in the industrial or technology sectors. An adverse event to an issuer in the industry may negatively impact the fund's performance.

Applying ESG (Environmental, Social, Governance) sustainability criteria to the investment process may exclude securities of certain issuers for non-investment reasons and therefore the Fund may forgo available market opportunities.
